

In my opinion, Wireless Local Number Portability has been delayed long enough. It is clear that many wireless service providers want to delay this action further in order to artificially maintain customer loyalty. Consumers need to be able to choose a wireless provider based on price and quality of service instead of being held hostage by the cost and aggravation of changing their number. I, for one, have considered changing service providers multiple times only to stay with my current provider due to the hassle and cost of changing numbers. Please force these service providers to implement number portability without further delay.
